Chairman of Chamber of Commerce Good Roads Committees Opposes Townshend Bill Highway Program.

Informity of construction.
Expedition of the movement of materials for road-building and the securing of sufficient railroad equipment for interstate and state transportation of materials through organized petition to the railroad administration.

"The time has gone," Mr. King declared Friday morning when discussing the coming meeting, "when a state can build, roads without considering its neighbor states. With the development of motor-driven vehicles interstate traffic on public highways is, becoming quite as important as it is on railroads and waterways. Roads can no longer be built to serve a small number of persons, but must be built with the idea of serving the largest number. Because of this, I believe the states of the South ought to get together to map out a foint road-building program, work together in the building of highways to the advantage of all."

May Lose Federal Aid.

May Lose Federal Aid.

If the Southern states do not demanstrate that they can do this. Mr. King is of the opinion that the Townshend bill will be passed by the Federal congress and ultimately result in the Southern states losing a great deal of federal aid in road-building which they might get if it is not passed.

The Townshend till provides for the creation of a Federal Highway commission composed of five men, not more than three of whom shall be from any one political party, with power to lay cut and construct interstate and transcontinental roads and to regulate traffic on these roads. Under this bill the federal government would no longer assist the states in building roads, but would carry out its own road projects as it does its waterways improvements, and the states would get no help and have no rights in the matter, except such as the federal government conceded. According to the government's rules and regulations some states have federal highways projected through their territory and thus benefit by the blan, while others might get nothing. Mr. King thinks the Southern states would come nearer getting nothing than the states of any other section.

"The Townshend bill provides that the federal highway commission shall build as many as two bighways across each state." Mr. King said, "but does not say how many more it may build across other states, thus leaving a great leaway there for favorilism if the commissioners so desired. You find that in the method of apportioning the federal highway independent of the highway moneys shall be apportioned according to apportion, and, third, the balance according to public highways constructed; the mileage of highways to be determined by certain reports that are in the hands of the United States argicultural department received in 1914 or 1915."

Thus small thickly populated northern or castern states might get more mileage of federal highways than the large comparatively thinly populated northern or castern states. And, too, the fact that some May Lose Federal Aid.

age of federal highways than the large comparatively thinly populated Southern states. And too, the fact that some og the Southern states had not progressed as far in road building as the states of other sections, would mitigate against the South. "It seems to me," Mr. King continued, "that in this bill there is too much power vested in the against the South. "It seems to me,"
Mr. King continued, "that in this bill there is too much power vested in the federal commissioners in giving them the right to build more highways in certain sections than others if they desired to, and by that means, favor certain communities to the hurt of others. My interpretation of the bill gives power to the federal highway commission to take over for federal highways certain highways through certain states that may have been built by their state highway commissioners out of state funds and reimburse the state treasury for the amount of money expended in the huilding of said highways. This would give them the right to increase the funds greatly in the states that have already built highways, and take from those states which had not been so fortunate nor so progressive as to have built these highways."

The Townshend bill is receiving great favor in the North. East and West. Mr. King said. There are over 600 commonstrate the mention will commemorate the anniversary of the discovery of America Sunday, Oct. 12, when more than 200 members of the Memphis council, No. 616, Knights of Columbus, will be encolled in the fourth degree. Following this a formal banque will be held in the evening at the Hotel Chieca at which the governor of Tennessee, the Hon. A. H. Roberts; the attorney-general, the Hon. Samuel O. Bates, the Vicar-general of the Diocese of Nashville, the Rt. Rev. D. J. Murphy, and other prominent men will speak.

Special lighting effects in religious and patriotic designs have been arranged for this affair.

This is the first time in the history of the Memphis council, No. 616, Knights of Columbus, will be encolled in the currh degree. Following this a formal banque will be held in the evening at the Hotel Chieca at which the governor of Tennessee, the Hon. A. H. Roberts; the etion over free the huilding of said highways and take from these highways."

mercial and semicommercial and social organizations in the United States that have approved this bill, most of these being in the North, the Middle West and western sections of the United States."

Mr. King is afraid, too, that the handling of highway improvements, in so far as the federal government is concerned, might become a "pork barrel" proposition, just as waterways improvements have. This would be bad for the South, he thinks, us already "there seems to be a tendency goon the part of many of our leaders in the advocacy of better highways, especially in the North and East, to get advantage over the South in highways legislation."

"The principle underlying the establishment of a federal highway commission may be good to a limited degree."

Mr. King or refuded, "but when such absolute power is conferred as in the Townshend bill, "we are very much afraid of the outcome in so far as our section of the country is concerned. We do not mean by this to be extremely sectional, but we do think that we should take care of our interests and do not caissure men of the North and East and Middle West for doing the same."

Old Times Recalled Tydus, Negro Held Eh? Shooting And On Sedition Charge, Dancing On Gayoso Is Held To State

Dan Lemons, negro, was "walkin' the dog" to his heart's content at a dance at 214 Gayoso avenue, when he happened to feel in his hip pocket and found his pocketbook was missing. He found his pocketbook was missing. He quietly left the festivities to return a few minutes later with a revolver in his hand. He drew a bead on Hugh George, negro celebrator, and pulled the trigger. George executed a graceful dipwith his dusky companion, but kispt on dipping until he was stretched on the plan, where it was found he had a flesh wound in the thigh. Dissatisfied with his surroundings he got up and walked away after having his injury dressed.

The police are looking for Lemons.
